AROUND the TOWNSHIP

To the Ladies of Washington Township:

You are hereby cordially invited to attend the Township Register's Motion Picture Cooking School to be held at the Niles Theatre on next Wednesday, Thursday and Friday afternoons beginning at 2:30 o'clock.

It will be more than a cooking school as experts in their individual lines will demonstrate ways of performing all sorts of household tasks. Then, too, the talking picture, "Star in My Kitchen" is a romantic and entertaining full length feature film that would be worth sitting through if you were not interested in cooking or housework.

There is no charge whatever as you will be the guest of The Township Register. We'll be looking for you.

A positive "thumbs-down" attitude on Hallowe'en vandalism was expressed at this week's meeting of the Coordinating Council of the Washington Union High School. Recommendations that offenders be referred to officers of the law were made and communities were urged to provide wholesome fun for the celebration of this holiday.

Destructive elements of Hallowe'en celebrations can be eliminated through education just as hazing of Freshmen, vandalism in connection with interschool athletics and indiscriminate use of fireworks, it was stated.

* * * *

Hallowe'en will be moved up a couple of days—from Monday to Saturday, at least for the adults of the township, judging from the events scheduled for tomorrow evening when hundreds of residents will make the witches swing high and the goblins swoop low.

But the juniors will stick by the calendar and have their inning on Oct. 31. They have not announced a schedule of events for the evening, however.

An alleged practice on the part of a number of small merchants and their employes of taking a one-day vacation each election and going fishing or hunting apparently has become widespread enough to cause concern.

The State Chamber of Commerce after a survey addressed a letter to all member firms urging the heaviest possible vote on November 8 and that if you must go fishing or hunting, then get an absentee ballot from your county clerk and vote first.

Application for absentee ballot may be made in writing to the county clerk, anytime up to November 3.

BERKELEY MILK INSPECTOR FACES HOMICIDE CHARGE

CENTERVILLE — Dr. Gaylord K. Cooke of 1932 Yosemite Road, Berkeley, chief milk inspector for the City of Berkeley was charged with negligent homicide in the Centerville Justice Court after he is alleged to have struck a car driven by Mrs. Mary L. Gilbert who was fatally injured.

Dr. Cooke was released upon $1,000 bail and will appear this afternoon before Judge Allen G. Norris for a preliminary hearing. Mrs. Gilbert, accompanying her husband, B. R. Gilbert, 62, who was enroute to address a pension plan meeting at Eagles Hall, Alameda last Tuesday night, died at the Hayward hospital two hours after she was struck by a Southern Pacific train at an Alvarado crossing.

Officers Chosen By Township Club At Dinner Meeting

CENTERVILLE — The meeting of the Men's Club of Washington Township at the Country Club building last Thursday night was said to have surpassed even the "Christmas jinks," all the way from the fried chicken dinner served by the Ladies Guild of Niles, to the speaker and the entertainment which came from San Francisco.

President A. J. Petsche finished his term with a flourish from all reports and was presented with a handsome automobile robe in return for his services to the organization. The presentation was made by Judge Allen G. Norris.

New officers elected were Erle Hugelund, president; J. V. Goold, vice president; E. J. Pimentel, secretary and John Dutra, treasurer.

Two new members received were Howard White and Joe Bauhofer.

Frank T. Dusterberry, Howard Chadbourne and J. R. Blacow were appointed to draw up resolutions in memoriam to five deceased members, Henry May, Louis Ruschin, Garrett Norris, Thomas Power and George P. Lowrie, and to have these resolutions included in the minutes.

Gerry Watkins was the speaker and discussed Amendment No. 1 to be on the November ballot.

Entertainment included stunts by Ten Kai and Okina, Japanese magicians; accordion numbers by Margot; piano and song numbers by Rene' Marcel, song and dance novelties by Wanda Woolsey and Rollie Cate, master of ceremonies.

Approximately 65 were present. The dinner was served under the direction of Mrs. E. A. Ellsworth.

Central European Conditions Revealed By Budapest Grad

NILES—One of the best talks heard yet at the Niles Rotary Club was said to be that of Dr. Andrew Gyorgy, graduate of the University of Budapest and now an exchange student at the University of California. He has been in this country only about two months and brought first-hand information about Central European conditions.

He said the main conflict there lies in the fight of Nazis and Fascists against Communism but that democracies are being sacrificed to strengthen the position of the Nazis and the Fascists. The fact that practically all offices are appointive builds up a tremendous political machine which makes it possible to force the will of the leaders upon the people, he said.

E. D. Bristow, chairman of the committee on internationalism, was in charge of the program and promised more such talks in the near future.

Visitors were Clarence Johnson and Alvin Joseph of Hayward and Charles Burr and Joe Gomes of Niles.

THREE TOWNSHIP MEMBERS ON NEWLY NAMED COUNCIL

Appointment of E. Dixon Bristow, principal of the Niles Elementary School, as a member of the Educational Policies Council for Alameda County Schools was announced today by Edgar E. Muller, county superintendent of schools.

The Educational Policies Council is an extremely important committee," said Muller. "Its work will be to serve with the superintendent and his staff in the cooperative development of the best possible educational program for Alameda County Schools."

Members of the Educational Policies Council appointed for the school year 1938-39 also include A. J. Rathbone, Principal, Washington Union High School, Centerville; Mrs. Marie N. Dutra, Alviso School; and Thomas P. Maloney, principal of the Centerville Elementary School.

Free Talking Motion Picture Cooking School Opens Next Wednesday in Niles Theatre

Lock the doors and come to town!

The Township Register's Motion Picture Cooking School entitled "Star in My Kitchen" will be the real community attraction for three days at the Niles Theatre starting next Wednesday afternoon.

This fascinating and different cooking school is open entirely free to every woman in the township and The Register as well as the township merchants extend this last invitation to join in the home-making lessons and jolly entertainment for at least one day.

The Motion Picture Cooking School will be a practical rally of home-makers to contribute fresh perspective for the "same old job", the monotonous day in and day out job, yet the most important business in the world. Just as men have their annual conventions, where they listen to lectures from specialists, local women will have their convention to consider home-making problems.

Just as fresh inspiration for the old job is one of the by-products of the familiar cooking school, which presents a lecturer in a model kitchen, so are new ideas and keen incentive born in the film class for home-makers, with its novel approach and modern setting.

No "false-front" camera beautiful kitchens satisfied these specialists. They insisted on workng in complete, compact, modern kitchens which actually reflect more scientific ingenuity and careful planning than any living room.

Recognizing the demands of home experts, the producers of "Star in My Kitchen" signed all star kitchens, with an all star cast, adding a continual procession of close-ups, so that every seat in the Niles Theatre is a good seat for this amazingly pictured home making course.

Everyday happenings have been dramatized in the plot of "Star in My Kitchen." Behind the sparkling humor and suspense that are so necessary to screen stories was a deliberate plan—an ambitious determination to carry instruction, inspiration, and worthwhile home news to women in every community.

The camera took its time and it took its close-ups, so that every person in the theatre will have a "large as life, and twice as natural" view of each operation. There will be no "orchestra circle" at this entertainment, since the back row guests of The Register will have an equal chance to peer into the busy mixing bowl, watching the deft steps of measuring, creaming, sifting, and thorough mixing, not overlooking the final work of baking, roasting, French-frying or freezing.

For this is no half hearted demonstration. Each delicious dish will be completed and shown with such realism that there are sure to be hungry "ohs" and "ahs" from the audience. If any stray husbands get into the theatre, they are certain to ask, "When do we eat?"

Keeping up to the minute on fresh discoveries to ease the home manager's burdens, is one of the jobs of the household specialists who supervised the demonstrations in this profitable cooking school. Because they have devoted years of training and study to home problems, these capable experts know how to help other housekeepers to run their homes more smoothly, interestingly and economically.

Under the glow of their enthusiasm and creative skill, a well-cooked meal becomes elevated from "just a job" to an artistic achievement, requiring skill and imagination.

Not only does this picture show new dishes, styles, and interesting ways to serve everyday meals and party feasts, but it demonstrates how to make intelligent use of the ingenious mechanical servants that take the guess work out of house work.

What about recipes? Naturally every guest of The Register will want to test these tantalizing cures for menu monotony. Free recipe sheets will be distributed daily. And other things will be given away—valuable gifts that will find long and useful life in many a home.

Remember the dates, next Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, and the starting time is 2:30 p. m.

Undefeated Huskers Take On Fremont High At Sunnyvale

CENTERVILLE—With the season half over and no defeats recorded for the Centerville boys, Washington Union High School will journey down to Sunnyvale this afternoon to meet the Fremont High School football team.

Hopes of again carrying off the championship of the Santa Clara Valley Athletic League are growing though Coach Jud Taylor says he is still keeping his fingers crossed.

The first game of the season ended in a 19-0 score for Washington against Pleasanton. This was only a practice game. The first league game was at night on the new lighted field at Santa Clara. This ended in a 7-7 tie. The following week, the local boys defeated Los Gatos, 6-0 and last week they walked off with the big end of a 19-12 score.

After today, there are only two other league games—Mt. View on Nov. 4 there and Campbell on Nov. 18, here.

On Nov. 11, Centerville will meet Livermore at Livermore in the annual Armistice Day game for the benefit of the Veterans Hospital at Livermore. This game is sponsored by the American Legion posts of Livermore and Washington Township and is always the only Armistice Day celebration in this end of the county.

Farm Center Opens Membership Drive With Goal Of 200

NILES—With a goal of more than 200 members the Washington Eden Farm Center started its annual membership drive this week with a dinner meeting at the Hotel Belvoir. President Joe C. Shinn, Jr., is heading the drive.

Last year the local center captured the Farm Bureau Bell by enrolling 205 members, the largest in the county. This number, however, represents only 15 per cent of the farmers in the district while Livermore's 200 represents 90 per cent of the farmers in that section. Due to this fact, the local center is hoping to exceed last year's enrollment.

Working with President Shinn are R. C. Kennedy, Herbert Young Mrs. Joe Shinn, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Paul Dougherty, Harold Faria, George Lowrie, Charles Landgon, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Williams, Anthony Silva and others.

Hall will sing the following: "Zueignung" by Strauss; "A Page's Road Song," Novello; "I Love Life," Mana-Zucca; "Oh, Peter, go Ring Those Bells," Burleigh; "Steal Away", Lawrence Brown; "Goin' Ride Up in de Chariot," Boatner, and others.

Due to the fact that the proposed $1,000 improvement program is to be discussed during the business meeting, Mrs. Ellsworth has asked that members be present at 1:30 o'clock instead of at the usual hour at 2 p. m.

Abatement District Trustees Celebrate Hundredth Meeting

A milestone in the work of controlling mosquitoes in Alameda County is to be recognized when trustees of the Alameda County Mosquito Abatement District celebrate their 100th meeting with a dinner at Sequoyah Country Club on Wednesday, November 2.

Roland Bendel, abatement district Washington Township foreman, will be a guest at the trustees' meeting and dinner.

Three of the eight members of the present board of trustees have served continuously since the district was legally organized on March 14, 1930. They are Dr. Mark L. Emerson, district president and former Oakland city health officer who represents Oakland on the board, Prof. Charles Gilman Hyde, district secretary and professor of sanitary engineering at the University of California, representing the county at large, and Prof. W. B. Herms, head of the departments of entomology and parasitology at the University of California, representing Berkeley.

Accomplishments in control of the mosquito nuisance achieved under direction of the Board of Trustees since the local abatement district was organized in 1930 include the following:

Drainage of nearly 13,000 acres of salt marsh which formerly bred billions of migratory mosquitoes that infested large portions of Alameda County. More than 7,500 acres of this marsh area is located in Washington Township.

Regular maintenance of drainage structures and of 150 miles of drain ditch in order to keep the marsh mosquitoes subdued.

Fairly complete control of night-biting fresh water mosquitoes breeding in several hundred miles of creekbed and in thousands of miscellaneous collections of standing water including dairy drains, cess-pools and septic tanks, sewer catch basins, street vaults, and garden ponds by a program of regular oiling, stocking with "mosquito fish", and other abatement measures.

In addition to the three original board members the present trustees and the municipalities they represent are: Ralph S. Hawley, city engineer, Emeryville, vice-president of the abatement district; Howard Bronstein, assistant general manager of the Trojan Powder Company, San Leandro; Dr. Nelson E. Clemens, city health officer, Hayward; Burnett Hamilton, county surveyor, Alameda; and Dr. Harry J. Smith, city health officer, Piedmont.

The abatement district trustees serve without compensation. They are appointed for two year terms by the city councils of the municipalities in the district and by the Board of Supervsors.

FAILURE TO PROVIDE CASE IS HEARD

NILES — Mrs. Thomas Garcia walked out of the Niles Justice Court just $150 and a repentant husband to the good, after she had tried to push a 13 year old battery complaint against said spouse.

She changed the charge to failure to provide to which the defendant pleaded guilty and agreed to divide his $200 bail as the court suggested, $150 to his wife for support of three children and $50 for himself until he could get a job.

Matrimonial felicity was in the offing as Mrs. Garcia promised to take her husband back provided he lived up to his promise to "treat me good."

SYNOPSIS

Richard Exon, a poor young Englishman, befriends elderly Matthew Gering, who at his death, gives him a statement claiming he, Gering, is Rudolph Eibert Virgil, Count of Brief, of ancient Austrian nobility who was betrayed 20 years before by his twin brother, Ferdinand, whose sentence for forgery he himself served. Ferdinand appropriated his title, property and daughter. Before he dies, Gering tells Exon there is a family secret, known only to the head of the house, to be found in the great tower at Brief, by a doorway none can ever find. Exon inherits his uncle's fortune and sets out to right Gering's wrongs. En route he encounters Percy Elbert Virgil, son of the villainous Ferdinand and sees him in conference with Inskip, a diamond merchant. He engages a valet, Winter, who hates Percy and meets by chance at a garage, John Herrick, who is a linguist and who as a youth served as a page at Gering's wedding, and had visited Brief. Herrick agrees to aid Exon. They establish headquarters at Brenda Revoke's farm at Raven, a few miles from Brief and make their plans. They find the castle almost inaccessible. They see a closed car occupied by Percy Virgil, a chauffeur and a woman. Hearing a dog scream, they see the chauffeur flogging it, just as a horse with a girl astride bounds along the path and is felled by a strung wire. The girl, unconscious, is picked up carelessly by the chauffeur and woman, who then run away, after dropping her. Exon rescues the girl and carries her to his waiting car. He identifies the girl as Elizabeth, daughter of the disowned Gering, tells her of her cousin's plot to abduct her and takes her to Raven, where he tells her the story of her father and promises to go the limit to help her right her father's wrongs. Incredulous at first, Elizabeth gradually wins faith in her benefactor. Percy Virgil brings the police to Raven, announcing that two strangers are being sought for the kidnaping of Elizabeth.

The sergeant swallowed, and Virgil put in his oar.

"You may be strangers," he said, "but that doesn't put you above the law of the land."

"Nor, I trust," said Herrick, "beyond the traditional courtesy of its inhabitants. What is your rank in the police?"

Virgil flushed.

"I am not in the police," he said.

"Then why," said Herrick, "did you presume to address me?"

"My name is—"

"I have no desire," said Herrick, "to hear your name." He returned to the police. "You were saying that the matter was serious . . ."

Virgil looked ready to burst, but the sergeant went straight to the point.

"I will be plain," he said. "A lady has been abducted—a lady of high degree. She was kidnaped early this morning upon her father's estate . . . at Brief . . . some ten miles from here." He held up our map. "I think you will hardly deny that you know where that is."

"I have known where Brief was," said Herrick, "for 23 years."

The others stared.

Then—

"We are dealing with the present," said Virgil.

Herrick raised his eyebrows.

"Allow me to suggest," he said, "that you should keep to yourself such, er, discoveries as you may make." He turned again to the police. "Yes, gentlemen?"

The sergeant cleared his throat.

"In view, sir, of what has occurred, I must ask you to explain the markings upon this map."

"With pleasure," said Herrick.

"And I sincerely advise you to tell the truth."

"You will find," said Herrick, "that we have nothing to hide." He fingered his chin. "I stayed at Brief, as a child, in 1912. My mother and the Countess Rudolph were very close friends. Happening to be at Innsbruck a week ago, I felt a strong desire to visit the castle again. For various reasons I did not wish to leave cards. Much has happened, you know, in 23 years. My mother, the Count of Brief and the Countess Rudolph have died, the Lady Elizabeth has been born and, worst of all, I'm told that a vulgar blackguard, the son of an uncle of hers, has the run of the place."

A ghastly silence succeeded these moving words, the police regarding the gravel with goggling eyes and Virgil, dark red in the face, surveying Herrick with the glare of a baited beast.

"We, therefore, came here from Innsbruck on Sunday last. On Monday we started out to try to discover some spot from which we could view the castle, without going into the grounds. We only found one, and that was—too far away. Determined not to be beaten, we tried for the next three days—with the aid of that map. And all in vain . . . Last night we reviewed the position, and found it this—that we must either trespass or else go empty away.

"Now I do not like trespassing: but neither, I frankly confess, do I like going empty away. And in the end we decided to rise very early this morning, enter the park from the north and have a good look at the castle before anybody was up. And so . . . we did."

For a moment I thought that Virgil was going to faint. All the color was out of his face, which looked peaked and thin, and he did not seem to be breathing, but might have been turned to stone. Then a shiver ran through him, and a hand went up to his mouth.

But the police had no eyes for him. The two were staring at Herrick as though they would read his soul.

"At what times," said the sergeant, "did you enter and leave the estate?"

"We entered at four and we left about half past six."

There was an electric silence.

Then—

"I am bound to inform you," said the sergeant, "that what you have just admitted makes your position most grave. The outrage was committed this morning at six o'clock."

"Perhaps," said Herrick, "it was not committed by us."

The sergeant shrugged his shoulders.

"I shall have to—"

"I think it is clear," said Virgil, "that this gentleman is telling the truth." The two police stared upon him as though he were out of his mind. "I mean, if he were guilty, he would scarcely have made an admission which put the rope round his neck."

That Evening We Spoke of the Past and Present.

As soon as he could speak—

"But, sir," cried the sergeant, "a rope round the neck is harmless, unless it is tight. If every rogue was believed because he told such truths as could do him no harm—"

"These gentlemen," said Virgil, "have not the appearance of rogues. It only remains for you to beg their pardon and make a fresh cast. Good God, man, when time is so precious, do you propose to waste it in prying into two strangers' private affairs?"

With a manifest effort, the sergeant controlled his voice.

"Sir," he said, "if you do not wish to wait, you must leave us here. I have a sow by the ear, and until I know it's the wrong one, I will not let go." With that, he returned to Herrick. "You have said too much or too little. You were at Brief this morning from four until half past six. Kindly relate what you did there—from first to last."

"With very great pleasure," said Herrick, folding his arms. "We left our car at the mouth of the northern drive—after instructing our chauffeur, first, to seek some petrol, and then to wait in a wood a little way off. You will understand that we did not wish to be seen."

"Is your chauffeur here?" said the sergeant.

"He is. If you would like to see him—"

"Proceed, if you please."

"Before we had walked very far, we heard a car coming behind us, using the drive. At once we lay down in the bracken until it had passed."

His face like a mask, Virgil took out his case and selected a cigarette: but I saw a bead of sweat fall on the gold.

"It was not your car?" said the sergeant, plainly impressed.

Producing a notebook, his fellow made ready to write.

"It was not our car," said Herrick. "Others were abroad this morning . . . within the confines of Brief."

"Describe this car, if you please."

"It was closed and its blinds were drawn: its number-plate was obscured—I imagine, with oil and dust."

The sergeant turned to his fellow, pencil in hand.

"Have you got that down?"

The other nodded and Herrick resumed his tale, relating how the car had been met and had then been backed down the drive and into the track.

"There three people got out, and the man who had met them came up."

"Would you know them again, sir?" asked the sergeant.

"I should."

As the answer went down, I saw Virgil wipe his face.

"One of the three," said Herrick, "was a woman. She had a dog on a lead."

"A dog?" cried the police, together.

"A long-haired, black-and-white dog: a mongrel, about that size."

Struggling with his emotion—

"Sir," cried the sergeant, "I beg that you will forgive me if I have seemed something short. I have to do my duty, and your interest in Brief seemed strange. But now I know that you are telling the truth. The dog you describe was found at large in the park."

Respectfully thanking Herrick and handing him back our map, the sergeant begged that he would describe "the delinquents you so providentially saw"—and Herrick complied with a gusto which did my heart good.

His picture of Percy Virgil was actually taken from life. Lazily surveying his victim, he drew a merciless portrait of that unprincipled man: and I find it hard to believe that a rogue was ever so trounced.

Virgil's tormentor then repeated the horribly damning words which Virgil had said to his creatures before they had entered the wood, and when the sergeant seemed puzzled about the use of "the wire," suggested that it might have been used to trip a galloping horse.

Protesting their gratitude, the sergeant requested our names, and while Herrick was writing these down, turned and exhorted Virgil to enter and start the car.

"If you'll take us to Gabble, sir, I can get on to Innsbruck from there, and in less than two hours from now every police station in Austria will be alive with orders to search for the people we want."

"Splendid," said Virgil, somehow. He turned to Herrick and bowed. "Please believe that I shall not forget today . . . and that I am a man who invariably pays his debts."

"Is that a threat?" said Herrick.

I saw the police open their eyes, and Virgil in desperation let himself go.

"It's a warning," he snarled. "I do not believe your tale of the numberless car. That you saw a dog this morning proves nothing at all—except that you were at hand when the outrage was done. And who would think of so using a coil of wire — except a man who had planned to employ it that way?"

"Come, come, sir," said the sergeant. "You said yourself just now that these gentlemen—"

"I have changed my mind," spat Virgil, "as you have changed yours."

"I have just remembered," said Herrick, "that one of the men was called Max. Not the leader—the burly man, who got out of the car. The leader was sharp with him, as, indeed, with them all. I think that, if you could find them, they might give the leader away."

"And the name of the leader?" sneered Virgil. "Quite sure you didn't hear that?"

Herrick raised his eyebrows, before he returned to the police.

"You would not believe me," he said, "if I told you the leader's name. And so I prefer that you should apply to Max. But I'll tell you what I will do. I'll write it down for you, and I'll seal it up. And when Max has opened his mouth, you may break the seal. Thus I shall corroborate him, and he will corroborate me."

"Sir," cried the sergeant, "I beseech you to tell it us now."

"I will write it down," said Herrick. "Or, better still, Mr. Exon shall write it down. You will observe that I have not mentioned the name: yet he will go off and write it—which goes to show that he knows it as well as I."

With that, he turned to me and asked me to do as he said . . .

When I returned to the drive, Virgil was back in his car, beside himself with passion and shouting down the sergeant who seemed very much surprised.

"And if you choose," he concluded, "to take your cue from a couple of lying hounds who, if you had done your duty, would now be under arrest, you can take it alone."

With that he started his engine, let in his clutch and swung the car violently round. With storming gears, it squirted between the chestnuts and on to the road of approach.

The police stared after the fellow with open mouths: then they turned to see Herrick with a hand to his chin.

"I gather," he said, "that you find his behavior strange."

"I can't understand it," said the sergeant. "Ten minutes ago—"

"Quite so," said Herrick. "In fact, ten minutes ago he did his very best to get you away—because, when he heard the hour at which we had entered the park, he did not wish you to hear what I might have to tell." He took the envelope from me and held it out. "You may open that now, if you please, and read the name of the leader whom Max will betray. After that, you shall have some tea, and then, we'll drive you to Gabble to take what action you please."

The sergeant ripped the envelope open, and he and his fellow together peered at the sheet.

Percy Elbert Virgil

I thought they would never look up.

When at last they did, they seemed dazed; and Herrick called for Brenda and told her to give them some tea.

It was strange to sit down to supper later on with Lady Elizabeth taking the head of the board, but she seemed so glad to be with us and fell so naturally into the ways we kept that, for my part, I soon forgot how she came to be there and began to accept a relation which seemed too fair to be true.

Enough is as good as a feast, and after supper that evening we spoke of the past and present, but left the future alone.

Aviators Meet Few Birds Flying Above An Altitude of Five Thousand Feet

How high do birds fly in their seasonal journey? Actual evidence above the earth is still scanty, and only since the development of the airplane have definite altitudinal observations become available, writes Eleanor Allen in the Portland Oregonian. Earlier observers maintained that most normal migrations took place at heights above 15,000 feet. They attempted to justify their theory by an uncertain belief that flying became easier as altitude was gained. Aviators, however, are opposed to that theory, as it is found that with greater altitude there is increasing difficulty in maintaining speed and height.

From a considerable number of records based on the experiences of airmen, it has been found that it is exceptional in flying to meet with birds above an altitude of 5,000 feet, and that the bulk of migration is performed below a height of 3,000 feet from the earth.

Birds occasionally fly at great heights. Dr. A. F. R. Wollaston, when on the Mount Everest expedition in 1921, recorded godwits and curlews at 20,000 feet. It also has been recorded that an observer making photographic observations of the sun at Dehra in India obtained a photograph of geese estimated flying at an altitude of 29,000 feet.

Although it has been definitely established that the birds follow certain routes on their journeys to and from breeding grounds and winter homes, it is not generally understood that these routes are followed by the same groups of individual birds during successive years. This fact has been determined by the banding method earried on by the biological survey.

Dry Falls Greater Than Niagara

Historians claim that over 100,000 years ago a cataract 40 times greater than Niagara thundered over the 400-foot face of the Dry Falls of the Columbia river. The Dry Falls, preserved as a state park, has a vista house on the brink of the cliff where visitors may look three and one-half miles across the chasm to its opposite side. It is located at the lower end of the natural Grand Coulee. Geologists claim that a huge river once drained the territory east of the Appalachians into the Pacific, and that the great glacial age changed the prehistoric channel and left the Dry Falls.

Pretty New Work Clothes

WE CAN all get our work done better and more happily, if we go at it in the right clothes (and, of course, in the right way!), whether it's a complication in fractions, or the necessity of getting the house cleaned and dinner ready before a flock of in-laws arrive. Here are two new designs calculated to make life easier for ladies busy about the house and lassies busy in the schoolroom. Both are quick and easy to make. Each pattern is accompanied by a detailed sew chart.

House Dress for Large Women.

Every line of this simple dress is made for comfort and good looks. Ample armholes, a waist that looks slim but is thoroughly unconfined, a skirt wide enough to climb and to hurry in—all assure you complete freedom for working. The front fastening makes it easy to iron as well as to put on. The v-neck adds to the slenderizing effect of the long, plain lines. Contrasting cuffs with a touch of braid brighten it up, effectively. A diagram design, to be finished in a few hours. Make it of gingham, percale or calico.

Jumper Dress for School Girls.

This is an unusually good version of the always-smart jumper. It has such a nice, tiny waist, the skirt flares bee-yu-tifully, and the straps are so fixed that they won't fall off at the shoulders. Make several versions of the sweet little blouse, with its round collar and high-shouldered sleeves, in dimity, linen, organdy or flowered challis. One jumper, many blouses, make it easy to have a fresh outfit always ready for school. For the skirt, choose challis, jersey or flannel.

The Patterns.

No. 1623 is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50 and 52. Size 38 requires 5⅜ yards of 35-inch material; ⅓ yard contrasting for cuffs and pocket; 1¼ yards of braid.

No. 1520 is designed for sizes 6, 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. Size 8 requires 1⅜ yards of 35-inch material for the blouse; 1⅛ yards of 54-inch material for the jumper.

Fall and Winter Fashion Book.

The new 32-page Fall and Winter Pattern Book which shows photographs of the dresses being worn is now out. (One pattern and the Fall and Winter Pattern Book—25 cents.) You can order the book separately for 15 cents.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., 149 New Montgomery Ave., San Francisco, Calif. Patterns 15 cents (in coins) each.

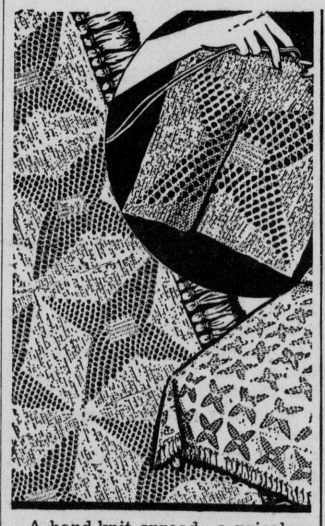
Lovely Squares Easy to Knit



A hand-knit spread—a priceless gem! Here's one of squares, so easy, anyone can knit it. Done on 2 large needles with 2 strands of string, there's no increasing or decreasing. You'll be pleased with it! Pattern 1820 contains directions for making the square; illustrations of it and of stitches; materials required; photograph of square.

Send 15 cents in stamps or coins (coins preferred) for this pattern to The Sewing Circle, Needlecraft Dept., 82 Eighth Ave., New York, N. Y.

Please write your name, address and pattern number plainly.

Speed of Baseball

Ken says: According to Dr. Coleman R. Griffith of the University of Illinois, some pitchers are able to throw a baseball at an initial speed of 120 feet a second. An average fast ball travels about 88 feet a second, making the time from the pitcher's hand to the batter approximately a half second. Most out-curves are slow balls that travel not more than 60 feet a second.

Measurement of golf ball travel, when the ball is hit by a driving machine set for a 250-yard drive, reveals that the ball speeds 214.28 feet per second over a distance of 14 inches, beginning 7 inches after contact with the clubhead.

How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 38 to 52), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells.

Get more fresh air, 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a good general system tonic take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vivacity to enjoy life and assist calming jittery nerves and disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life. LIONS ASKED TO SUPPORT BOY SCOUT PROGRAM UNDERWAY

CENTERVILLE — Lions were urged to support the Boy Scout program in the township, particularly with regard to the financial campaign now in progress, in a talk made by Tom Maloney at last week's meeting of the club.

SELECT COVER CROP SEED WITH CARE

Growers should select their cover crops with the same care exercised in selecting seed for any other crop, in the opinion of County Agricultural Commissioner Gordon B. Laing.

The common idea, that, because seed is to be used for a cover crop, the quality is of little consequence, is incorrect, says Commissioner Laing.

If the cover crop contains such seeds as Johnson grass, Morning glory, Hoary cress, or Yellow star thistle, often found in seed sold for cover crops, the consequences may be serious, the commissioner points out, and in that respect his view is supported by the state seed testing laboratory of the California Department of Agriculture.

RENO WEDDING SURPRISES FRIENDS

The deceased was the brother of Frank Luna and John Luna of Decoto and Mrs. Lorraine Dover of Stockton. He was a native of Newark and was 58 years old.

RECKLESS DRIVING

NILES—Benny Anicas, Filipino, was fined $25 after he had pleaded guilty to reckless driving before Judge J. A. Silva at the Niles Justice Court. Edward Harvey, complaining witness, was on the stand, testifying that his wife, Irene, had been injured in the accident but that Anicas had paid the doctor's bill and made restitution for damages to his car.

HALLOWE'EN

Hallowe'en is Junior's night. For 364 days of the year, the exuberant youthful yen to leap over the traces—to violate the grown-ups' rules for proper conduct, monotonously is denied him. But on Hallowe'en your windows may be soaped, the front gate mysteriously transported to the garage roof.

Okay, Johnny. Just don't go too far—and Dad will understand. He wishes, he too, had just one day in the year to kick over his traces—to tell the boss where to get off, to talk back to the traffic cop, and the like. The night is Junior's—but the spirit of Hallowe'en is in all of us.

MISSING VOTERS

Where were the 1,385,033 registered Californians who failed to vote in the August 30 primary?

Sleeping, fishing, or just absent-minded?

Whatever the reason, the primary's tally sheets, now made known, credited 2,069,025 voters with going to the polls out of 3,454,058 who were entitled to vote.

For the sake of the 1,385,033, and for California's sake, it is to be hoped these absent ones were only postponing, not cancelling, their visit to the voting booth on November 8.

SMASH THE..... "SINGLE TAX"

If a man steals your purse, at the point of a gun,

IT'S ROBBERY !

But if tax cranks and social revolutionists rob you of your home, your farm, your job and your savings,

IT'S YOUR OWN RESPONSIBILTY

Your DEFENSE is in your own hands—in your intelligent use of the ballot.

The discredited, six-times-defeated "Single Tax" will appear as Proposition No. 20 on your November ballot.

This ruinous proposal would—

Confiscate Homes and Farms by piling Extortionate Taxes on Land—Higher than Taxpayers could pay.

It would wreck trades and industries, skyrocket rents, drain the State Treasury of the funds necessary to pay old age pensions, to maintain the public schools and other essential functions of government.

It would bring chaos, distress and disaster to California.

And Remember: You Can't Vote Sales Tax Out, Without Voting "Single Tax" in. The bait of "sales tax repeal" is a deliberate attempt to snare the unwary voter.

Your Health May Depend on Your Teeth
An Editorial by C. Houston Goudiss

The reason why some men and women in their middle years look and feel younger today than their parents did at the same age, is because they have learned something of the importance of caring properly for their teeth. In recent years, dentists have discovered that sound teeth are in truth a passport to good health, and that there is as close a relationship between healthy teeth and healthy bodies as between decayed teeth and sickly bodies.

Unfortunately, however, only a small percentage of our population is yet aware of the far-reaching effects of teeth upon health, and a distinguished scientist is so disturbed over our national ignorance in this respect that he has said that unless this trend is reversed, the course of human evolution will lead downward to extinction. That statement is no exaggeration. For it would be difficult to over-estimate the influence of the teeth on human health and happiness.

For many years I have endeavored to explain that a neglected tooth—which soon becomes a decayed tooth—is a poison factory, distributing its noxious products to every part of the body, and that it may lead indirectly to neuritis, rheumatic ailments, dyspepsia, and other obscure complaints.

In many of the "WHAT TO EAT AND WHY" articles, which have appeared in this newspaper over my signature, I have endeavored to point out the close relationship between diet and dental disease; between frequent and thorough brushing of the teeth with an efficient dentifrice so as to remove all food particles, and strong, beautiful teeth.

As a result of these articles, I have received many letters, showing that homemakers are eager for sound, authoritative advice on the proper care of the teeth. To help these and other readers how to properly care for their teeth, I have prepared a booklet on—"BUILDING AND PLANNING HEALTH" which I am offering FREE, because I feel so strongly that this information should be in every home, knowing as I do, that the salvation of the human race may lie in saving their teeth.

HALT THIS
Plunge into SQUANDERMANIA!

Proposition No. 13 on your November ballot is a brazen attempt to let down the bars to wholesale public borrowings which would mean—

STAGGERING DEBT AND NEW TAX BURDENS

This dangerous proposal would abolish the basic safeguard requiring a two-thirds vote for bond issues!

It makes it easier to get into debt, but harder to get out!

It would permit the issuance of revenue bonds, IN ANY AMOUNT, by a bare majority of those actually going to the polls. In reality, it would mean that any district, city or county could be plunged into debt by A SMALL MINORITY, as only a fraction of the registered vote usually turns out for a bond election.

You can't afford it. Your neighbors can't afford it. No city or district in California can afford it!

U. S. SENATOR

Do something for yourself — to better those conditions of State and Nation which have hurt us all.

Do it by electing Philip Bancroft United States Senator!

Philip Bancroft raises your voice against the causes of depression—against Utopian schemes whether for State or Nation—against vicious trade treaties that permit foreign nations to dump $2 worth of their produce here, while buying only $1 worth of ours.

He raises your voice against un-American and subversive radical activities—against National Labor Relations Board favoritism to the C.I.O. and its prejudice against the A. F. of L. and employers.

He raises your voice in favor of prosperity soundly founded—in favor of labor peace and impartial labor administration—in favor of free enterprise in business and agriculture—in favor of non-political relief, as relief and not as a career—in favor of tariff protection for American agriculture, industry and labor—in favor of America!

HIRAM JOHNSON SAYS:
"Of course I am for Philip Bancroft for Senator! . . . I am for him because he has honesty, ability, and, above all, courage. . . . In a political world of deceit and hypocrisy he stands forth a new kind of campaigner, who believes in what he says and says it without equivocation."
